And second, none of them seem to exist. Tonight WORLD IN ACTION sets out on

THE TRAIL OF THE VANISHING VOTERS

TRACKING SHOT BOTHAM STREET

The Barkers, the Angoys, the Bartons and Mr Harry Porter are apparently fictitious characters in a bizarre exercise which could affect the outcome of a South American election.

TRACKING SHOT - SUNSET ON RICE FIELDS

The former British colony of Guyana is perched on the shoulder of South America. Next Monday it holds its first Independent Election, an election of international importance. The strong Opposition is led by a Marxist. If he won, America could have another Cuba on her doorstep.

GUYANA DEFENCE FORCE TRAINING

Guyana has a bitter past. Nearly two hundred people died in a violent struggle between the parties before independence.

MULE CART - AFRICANS IN GEORGETOWN

There are two main racial groups. Guyanese of African origin are concentrated in the towns and dominate the police, army and civil service. Most of them will vote for the existing largely Negro Government.

INDIANS ON TRAIN TO
SUGAR PLANTATIONS

But the majority of Guyanese are of Indian origin. Their ancestors were shipped from India to labour in the sugar fields.

SUGAR PLANTATIONS

They are likely to vote massively for the Opposition - and it's Indian Marxist leader. To win, the Government needs every vote it can lay its hands on, and it's taking no chances. A thousand troops patrolled the plantations when Indian sugar workers went on strike last month.

SUGAR CUTTER

All the old bitterness between Indian and Negro, between left and right, still simmers. But we did find one floating voter in the can fields.

INTERVIEWER

Who are you going to vote for in this election?

SUGAR CUTTER: SYNC

Well as to now I can't say yet. Because I did not consider in my mind yet who I'm going to vote for. Later on when I feel whoever in my mind, choose to vote for.

REGISTRATION CARDS

Georgetown, Capital of Guyana. This is the Centre where the Government compiled the disputed registers of voters. 300,000 people in Guyana have now been photographed, registered and deemed eligible to vote by this office. And despite opposition protests the office has also registered 67,000 voters outside Guyana for the first time. These overseas voters don't have to be photographed. They make up no less than one sixth of the total electorate. The office staff are overwhelmingly drawn from the pro-Government negro block. We asked Chief Elections Officer Reg Butler why.

BUTLER SYNC
MUTE IDENT (Commentary

BUTLER

It is a normal thing. It happened in the last Government, when they were preparing the registers they have to see that they put the person in to look after their own interests. They wouldn't like to know that they're putting in anybody who would embarrass them in any way. This is a normal thing that they do appoint persons whom they can trust and carry out their functions.

WORLD IN ACTION did its own arithmetic.
Mr Ferreira's final lists name 43,423 Guyanese voters in Britain. We checked British census and immigration statistics but we could not find many more than 20,000. There are certainly not 43,423 Guyanese voters.

SHOT PANNING OFF SHOULDER
THROUGH A GAP IN FENCE

In fact, nearly half the 550 addresses we visited had never heard of the Guyanese voters who should have been there. And our researchers found even more extraordinary examples.

In London's East End, voters, Yearwood, Howard and Nedd should have been living at 16, 20 & 22 Rendlesham Road. Demolition began here a year ago and a school is being built on the site.

14 Homer Road, 15 & 16, more voters should live here but the three houses were council padlocked two years ago. Examples like this cropped up all over London. Using the A to Z street guide, we set off for South London to find 15 Vant Road, Tooting. We found numbers 19 and 17 but there was an old established builders yard where number

15 VANT ROAD

15 and Miss Gladys Cooper should have been.

LANCELOT FERREIRA SYNC

FERREIRA SYNC

We checked the correctness of the addresses to ensure that if an address has been given, it actually exists. That's the reason for checking the A - Z ...particular address, we check the address to ensure that it exists.

INTERVIEWER SYNC

Well I actually didn't do the checking myself but my staff did and I have confidence in them and I'm sure that they've done a good job.

ARVON ROAD

COMMENTATOR

And it is also unlikely that Gladys Foster ever lived at 32 Arvon Road, Islington. The houses here made way for the railway in 1874.

REGINALD BUTLER SYNC

INTERVIEWER SYNC

And you feel there are absolutely no flaws?

BUTLER SYNC

Where I'm concerned there's none. No flaws at all because everything is done in accordance with the regulations or in accordance with an Act or Legislation which was passed by the House of Assembly with both sides present and so long as it is passed I'm just merely carrying out the functions or the requirements of that particular legislation which was discussed by the government.

DEMOLITION SITES

COMMENTATOR

The conclusions of our London survey were emphatic. Most of the overseas voters on the Guyanese electoral list were not at the addresses given.

Seventy five of the houses were derelict or non-existent. In fact of the 550 names we checked in London little more than a hundred were genuine Guyanese voters. For conclusive proof we sent out researchers in Manchester.

So they found the proof we needed.

CECIL STREET, M/C

In Cecil Street Manchester. Here there should be sixty Guyanes voters. We looked very hard but we couldn't find a single one.

PUB WITH PINDER ST AND RADNOR ST ON IT

And where Radnor Street, Pinder Street and 30 Guyanese were supposed to be, only a pub survived the bulldozers.

GENERAL DEMOLITION SITES
AROUND MOSS SIDE

In Manchester we checked 350 addresses, one house in every six listed. 50 per cent, a full half of these houses didn't even exist. We found only one genuine voter for every 20 listed. Our total survey in London and Manchester proves beyond doubt that the list of overseas voters in the Guyana election is a massive fabrication.

ELECTIONS COMMISSION. SHOTS
OF MEMBERS OF IT FINISHING
OFF ON SIR DONALD JACKSON

COMMENTATOR

When the British left Guyana in 1966, a special Election Commission had been set up in Guyana to supervise voting and guard against corruption. But in recent months the Burnham Government has whittled away the Commission's power. Although the three major parties each appoint a member, the chairman also has a vote and the Election Commission is now deadlocked. The Chairman, Sir Donald Jackson, is a former High Court Judge.

SIR DONALD JACKSON V/O

JACKSON V/O

It is not for me to enquire and in point of fact I do not go about looking for faults, I try to find out the best in everyone so that I may improve my own imperfections.

SIR DONALD SYNC

SIR DONALD SYNC

I would start out - I would start out by presuming that they are correct and if information comes to me which I am sure about that there is something wrong and it has been proved to me then I would say I am so very sorry that this is so, I never expected it. But I don't start out by presuming that a person would perform this act without impartiality or without good judgement. I don't assume that at all. Otherwise one would get the wrong conclusions.

Comrades, we in the country must realise that in so far as people overseas are going to have a preponderating voice in the choice of candidates at the next election, the people of Guyana must be fighting for the electoral suffrage all over again....We must therefore call upon the Government, call upon the elections commission, call upon freedom loving people everywhere CHEERS- we must call upon the international commission of jurists to investigate what is going on here to witness the trial on the two writs which have been filed.

They have no right to vote in this country while we here in this country suffer and they making their money outside and we in this country punishing so I don't see why they should vote from that side to this country. They have no interest in this country, why they vote from there to here. We the people live here, we see what happens here, we know why the problems for we, they can't know why the problems here.

SECOND MAN SYNC

SECOND MAN SYNC

It's not fair to we. I don't see what kind of interest they've got in this country that they must vote for this country and they got no interest in this country. We the people who live in this country we must vote for the country not them

CHEDDI JAGAN

CHEDDI JAGAN SYNC

Well the whole thing is completely immoral in the sense that never in the history of any country has there been such a big slice of the electorate coming from the outside, I think in the UK and the United States where this is allowed it's done to a very small extent, maybe 1% of the votes.

COMMENTATOR

The Opposition leader Cheddi Jagan

CHEDDI JAGAN

They have no connection with Guyana save they may have been born here, they don't live here, they don't pay any taxes here, they don't even know what's going on in Guyana and the fact of the matter is, the foreign vote is likely to decide the electoral results of this election. In other words who will be the government of Guyana. This whole thing is immoral.

FORBES BURNHAM

FORBES BURNHAM SYNC

This is just another gimmick being used by the Opposition. At first they said we would not hold elections, then secondly -

COMMENTATOR

Forbes Burnham, Prime Minister.

FORBES BURNHAM SYNC

- they said we would use voting machines. Now voting machines have not been used. They've got to find another gimmick and the gimmick now is the overseas vote which is something that is provided for under the constitution. I am not in any way concerned about that and I give politicians who are losing the right to find gimmicks.

INTERVIEWER

This is a pretty serious gimmick in one sense because unless I'm wrong there are 67 thousand foreign voters.

BURNHAM SYNC

Not foreign voters. Guyanese resident overseas entitled to vote under the constitution.

INTERVIEWER

Okay, fair enough, 67 thousand people have been registered overseas, they are eligible to vote in this election. This forms 1/6th of ~~xx~~ your elect rate. Now is it fair that 1/6th of your possible total electorate should be living overseas?

BURNHAM SYNC

There's no question of fairness. In the last American elections, over three million people overseas voted. It's a question of your constitution. If your constitution permits your residents overseas to vote, they are entitled to vote. What is all this nonsense about fairness. Can the constitution be unfair?

CHEDDI JAGAN SYNC

CHEDDI JAGAN

If the government cannot win a fair election at home - have to resort to fraud, overseas voting for instance - another time comes around it cannot even win by that kind of fraud and therefore it has to impose a military dictatorship.

FORBES BURNHAM SYNC

BURNHAM

Elections aren't elections unless they're free. As a matter of fact perhaps its somewhat tautologous to speak of free elections.

INTERVIEWER SYNC

Many people have told me though that this election is completely rigged.

BURNHAM SYNC

Sure they will say that. Didn't they say that we were going to use voting machines, didn't they say that we weren't going to have elections, well you must pull a rabbit out of the hat every time.

INTERVIEWER SYNC

Is this really just a rabbit?

BURNHAM

It is a rabbit so far as I am concerned.

CHEDDI JAGAN

CHEDDI JAGAN

Burnham has the making of another Hitler in Guyana and under American backing they have put him there and they are going to prop him up. And this is dangerous for Guyana, for the people of Guyana, not only the people. We see the same kind of thing what it has lead to in Vietnam.

FORBES BURNHAM

INTERVIEWER

What do you think of Dr Jagan?

BURNHAM

A communist. More of a communist even than Tito because while Tito objected to the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia as also did the Western Communist parties, he justified it.

INTERVIEWER

Can you give me any idea of what you think about him personally?

BURNHAM

A very charming person but the most incompetent administrator.

INTERVIEWER

Do you think he's fit to rule his country, to govern his country?

BURNHAM

The electorate didn't think so in '64 and I have good reason to believe they wouldn't think so in '68 either.

Mr Joe Hughes is one of the Guyanese officials handling the election in Britain. Between April and July he says he was solely responsible for registering the names of all Guyanese living in Wolverhampton. Mr Hughes and officials for other areas were hand-picked by the Guyana High Commission in London. Their job was to find all Guyanese in their areas and get positive proof of their right to vote. The man in charge was the High Commission's First Secretary, Mr Patrick Thierens, Chief Registration Officer for the whole of Britain. To find out just how well the

Last week WORLD IN ACTION reporters invited the Guyana High Commissioner in London to explain the discrepancies in the lists of voters. The Commissioner is Sir Lionel Luckhoo, QC, CBE. FORBES BURNHAM SYNC

INTERVIEWER SYNC

Going back to the foreign voters, would you agree with a figure of just over 43,000 foreign registrants in Great Britain?

BURNHAM SYNC

What have I got to amplify as Prime Minister I say that I am satisfied that the electoral process was impartial.

BOMB SITE GENERAL SHOTS

COMMENTATOR

Seven days ago Mr Burnham again reasserted that the lists of Guyanese voters in Britain were genuine. That is not true. Most of them are fakes. And the scale of the discrepancies indicates something more sinister than incompetence. Voting in Britain ends today and later this week Sir Lionel should fly home and cast the votes of Guyanese in Britain. We wonder whether our vanishing voters will reappear in the ballot boxes of Georgetown.
