The struggle to end PNC rule continues during the 1970’s

Dr. Jagan always saw the need for a political solution in Guyana which would alleviate the problem of ethnic inequality and was for the construction of a “modern millenarian” power which could fight the rigors of modern authoritarian rule, never lost the opportunity to join the new movement with the PPP. He was named by the later President Forbes Burnham, in which he saw as constructive since he believed in the principle of unity and struggle.

In August 1973 in light of the border threat from Venezuela and certain circumstances posed by the BAC, the PPP offered “critical support” to the military junta while Burnham’s government prepared to take action. In 1978, at the 26th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, Jagan met with other foreign delegations; however, at the last minute after Burnham demanded the extension of a critical withdrawal in the “peace”.

The struggle for the freedom of Arnout Rampersaud-a PPP activist on a fraudulent charge of murder between 1973 and 1977, who was never tried in absentia, and the struggle against the Referendum Bill in 1978 which was designed to prolong the general elections due in 1979.

Major losses were the struggle for the freedom of Arnout Rampersaud-a PPP activist on a fraudulent charge of murder between 1973 and 1977, who was never tried in absentia, and the struggle against the Referendum Bill in 1978 which was designed to prolong the general elections due in 1979.

Dr. Jagan received the Order of Friendship at the Founders Day in 1978. He said: “In our time many heroes of the Third World have not been prominent for the award of nationalistic honor. But in the case of Dr. Jagan, the honor is well deserved. He is one of the great organizers of the Third World. He is in some ways better than all of them, in the sense that he is a true intellectual, a true man of the people, and also with the people of the whole region.”

One of the founders of the PPP, Mr. & Mrs. Ramkaran taking part in Parliament.

Celebrating the 40th Anniversary of the PPP.

The photo above with Dr. Jagan at the podium was taken during the 20th PPP Congress held in 1977. As you can see the call was not taken. In the photo below Dr. Jagan is shaking hands with Walter Rodney in 1971. at the PPP congress, as Dr. James Millard and Rupert Repronation took us.

With Patriarch of Moscow.

Dancing an animated routine at a PPP event.

Breaking the bread-and-butter trail with Chadthand Jagan to set a standard on behalf of the PPP during a visit to Moscow. They saw the PPP as the Fifth Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

At the National Park on May Day 1978.