In 1971 meeting the Captains of Obudu village in The British Settlement.

On February 23, 1970, Guyana became a Co-operative Republic and Dr. Jagan wrote:

"The slogan 'Co-operative' Republic is a pack of lies, a fraud that only covers the reality of a two thirds majority. Dr. Jagan wrote: "The slogan 'co-operative' republic is a pack of lies, a fraud that only covers the reality of an neo-colonialist, capitalist-imperialist republic.""

During this period civil rights were repeatedly violated. Cheddi Jagan and the PPP always stood up against colonialism, neo-colonialism, imperialism, militarism and apartheid, by supporting national liberation movements and demanding international solidarity against imperialism. In 1970 the SANCO, the national trade union federation of the PPP, protested against the war in Vietnam. Following this protest, the PPP boycotted the 1970 elections in Guyana.

On February 23, 1970, Guyana became a Co-operative Republic and Dr. Jagan wrote: "The slogan 'Co-operative' Republic is a pack of lies, a fraud that only covers the reality of a two thirds majority. Dr. Jagan wrote: "The slogan 'co-operative' republic is a pack of lies, a fraud that only covers the reality of an neo-colonialist, capitalist-imperialist republic.""

Leading a protest march against the neo-fascist PNC Government.

Cheddi Jagan wrote: "I have hereafter an inheritance, or rather one paid for me at the feet of my enemies, and who commanded me to use it in the following manner: 'Do not fight, for your fight will be for nothing. Do not be afraid, for your struggle will be victorious.'"" Cheddi Jagan exposed the assaults on freedom of the press, academic freedom, widespread discrimination, especially in the education system, the arbitrary use of violence and torture, and the imprisonment of political prisoners. During this period civil rights were repeatedly violated. Cheddi Jagan and the PPP always stood up against colonialism, neo-colonialism, imperialism, militarism and apartheid, by supporting national liberation movements and demanding international solidarity against imperialism. In 1970 the SANCO, the national trade union federation of the PPP, protested against the war in Vietnam. Following this protest, the PPP boycotted the 1970 elections in Guyana.

"In these 40 years, whatever I have achieved can be credited firstly to my parents and my wife, secondly to all those who inspired me to struggle. My comrades' steadfastness gave me the strength to continue, especially in times of adversity."

During this period the PNC and IMF policies brought disaster to the Guyanese people. The sugar industry was severely affected, and the country was plunged into a deep economic crisis. In 1976, Cheddi Jagan and the PPP went on a trip to Moscow to meet with his daughter Janet Jagan. Cheddi Jagan exposed the assaults on freedom of the press, academic freedom, widespread discrimination, especially in the education system, the arbitrary use of violence and torture, and the imprisonment of political prisoners. During this period civil rights were repeatedly violated. Cheddi Jagan and the PPP always stood up against colonialism, neo-colonialism, imperialism, militarism and apartheid, by supporting national liberation movements and demanding international solidarity against imperialism. In 1970 the SANCO, the national trade union federation of the PPP, protested against the war in Vietnam. Following this protest, the PPP boycotted the 1970 elections in Guyana.

Fighting for free and fair elections - the early 1970's

During this period civil rights were repeatedly violated. Cheddi Jagan and the PPP always stood up against colonialism, neo-colonialism, imperialism, militarism and apartheid, by supporting national liberation movements and demanding international solidarity against imperialism. In 1970 the SANCO, the national trade union federation of the PPP, protested against the war in Vietnam. Following this protest, the PPP boycotted the 1970 elections in Guyana.

In 1971 Cheddi Jagan went on a visit to the Ripudaman savannahs of Guyana. Cheddi Jagan wrote: "The slogan 'Co-operative' Republic is a pack of lies, a fraud that only covers the reality of a two thirds majority. Dr. Jagan wrote: "The slogan 'co-operative' republic is a pack of lies, a fraud that only covers the reality of an neo-colonialist, capitalist-imperialist republic.""

Addressing a political meeting of the PPP.

"In the face of war, whatever I have achieved was in the interest of my people and my comrades. It was to protect my liberty and my comrades' liberty. It was to fight for our freedom. It was to fight for our country. It was to fight for our people. It was to fight for our future."

Cheddi Jagan spoke at meetings and also used her pen to expose the PNC government. Her book on the 1973 rigged elections was a major contribution to the struggle for democracy and social justice in Guyana. She showed that under the PNC regime, National Service was used to oppress, discriminate and to militarise the country.

"In these 40 years, whatever I have achieved can be credited firstly to my parents and my wife, secondly to all those who inspired me to struggle. My comrades' steadfastness gave me the strength to continue, especially in times of adversity."

Meeting with reporters, friends and foreign delegations to get the word out on the situation at home.

Cheddi Jagan's dynamic personality and fighting spirit are expressed in these photos of him speaking at meetings during this period.

Meeting with waterfront workers at his office as he addresses a public meeting.

Cheddi Jagan in 1971 while on a visit to the Ripudaman savannahs of Guyana.

Cheddi Jagan in 1971 while on a visit to the Ripudaman savannahs of Guyana.

Cheddi Jagan with members of the PPP along with being of the club sugar workers, top months of this grain of the Enmore Martyrs.

"I have hereafter an inheritance, or rather one paid for me at the feet of my enemies, and who commanded me to use it in the following manner: 'Do not fight, for your fight will be for nothing. Do not be afraid, for your struggle will be victorious.'"

Leading a protest march against the neo-fascist PNC Government.

Cheddi Jagan's dynamic personality and fighting spirit are expressed in these photos of him speaking at meetings during this period.

Cheddi Jagan with his daughter in Moscow.

"As we go about our daily work and where we are, some stand not clear, when standing at the feet of our enemies, but command us to use it in the following manner: 'Do not fight, for your fight will be for nothing. Do not be afraid, for your struggle will be victorious.'"