A Problem for Britain

Cheddi B. Jagan

The dentist from North-western University, who has scored a triumph in British Guiana's Parliament, is a man no official in Britain's Government would fail to take notice of. Dr. Cheddi B. Jagan (pronounced JAY-gahn) has received a warm welcome from his minister of labour, and his call for expulsion of the British, the newspaper's correspondent wrote, left no officials in London's Foreign Office cold.

of-the-road United Democratic Party, the equally middle-of-the-road National Labor Party, to chalk up any victories.

The fourteenth seat, in the remote northwestern district, is expected to be won by either Dr. Jagan or Burnham. Full returns are not likely to be received before Thursday. The leftist victory came as no surprise in an election characterized by a low level of turnout of voters. The turnout was estimated at about 10 per cent of the 212,000 registered.

But it unquestionably loomed a defeat of Britain's efforts for the last four years to encourage the emergence of the middle class parties here and thereby to sap Dr. Jagan's strength.

For Dr. Jagan, a 39-year-old dentist of Indian descent, the election was a reaffirmation of his popularity despite, or perhaps because of, his offer from Dr. Jagan and Burnham. As an official member of the Ministry of Lands and Mines, he has managed to shift the focus of his policy away from the office to political affairs. He served as a Minister in the British Guiana Government, and was a member of the British Guiana Legislature. The new party, he said, would work towards self-government that was now possible.

JAGANS TO STAND

The new party, he said, would work towards self-government that was now possible.

While Dr. Jagan's election success is creating problems for the British, it is also expected to produce problems for him. He has been characterized as a Communist, but it is noted, his wing of the party has been able to call on the support of the United States and Britain.

The electoral roll was based on the list compiled in 1953, according to the British Guiana Constitution. The new party, he said, would work towards self-government that was now possible.

POLLING ON MONDAY

Four parties, including the People's Progressive party, led by a non-Marxist leader, have announced their intention to stand in the next election. The new party, he said, would work towards self-government that was now possible.
